Definitions and Explanations of Terms

TYPE of facility is listed to provide some of the information that may be needed by readers. The terms used reflect either programmatic support (which may affect scope of services and/or target populations) or traditional descriptions of facilities.

CHC: Community Health Center

Community Health Centers are funded by a federal grant program under Section 330 of the Public Health Service Act and administered by the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) of the US Department of Health and Human Services. Community Health Centers provide comprehensive preventive, primary medical care, dental, and mental health services. Not all services are provided on-site; some may be provided through contract and referral systems. Community Health Centers are governed by a volunteer board of directors representative of the communities they serve, with a majority of board members who are users of the health center. Community Health Centers must provide services to everyone, regardless of ability to pay.

Community Health Center services are not free, but ensure that lack of income or insurance are not barriers to care. Patients who are not covered by insurance are eligible for discounted fees. Finally, Community Health Centers have a responsibility to focus upon the health concerns of their entire service area and not only the portion of the community that receive care in their clinics. Community Health Centers are responsible for working to increase access to healthcare within their service areas.

CHAP Site: Community Health Aide Program Site

The Community Health Aide (CHA) Program developed in the 1950s in response to a number of health concerns including the tuberculosis epidemic, high infant mortality, and high rate of injuries in rural Alaska. In 1968, the program received formal recognition and congressional funding. The long history of cooperation and coordination between the federal and state governments and the Native tribal health organizations has facilitated improved health status in rural Alaska.

The program now consists of a network of approximately 500 Community Health Aides/Practitioners (CHA/Ps) in over 170 rural Alaska villages. Community Health Aides/Practitioners work within the guidelines of the Alaska Community Health Aide/Practitioner Manual, 1998 Revised Edition which outlines assessment and treatment protocols. There is an established referral relationship, which includes mid-level providers, physicians, regional hospitals, and the Alaska Native Medical Center. In addition, providers such as public health nurses, physicians, and dentists make visits to villages to see clients in collaboration with the CHA/Ps. The Alaska Area Native Health Service has the responsibility for provision of medical and health related services to Indian Health Service beneficiaries residing in Alaska. These services are provided by tribal organizations within the Alaska Native Health Care System. The village based CHA/Ps are a vital link in the delivery system.

Community Health Aides are selected by their communities to receive training. Training centers are located in Anchorage, Bethel, Nome, and Sitka. There are four sessions of CHA/P training - each lasts three to four weeks. Between sessions, the CHA/Ps work in their clinics completing a skills list and practicum. Completion of the four session training curriculum and successful completion of a clinical skills preceptorship and examination, qualify a Community Health Aide (CHA) as a Community Health Practitioner (CHP). CHA/Ps at any level of training may obtain certification by the Community Health Aide Program Certification Board.

For more information on the Community Health Aide Program, please contact Torie Heart at Alaska Native Tribal Health Consortium, 4000 Ambassador Drive, Room 419, Anchorage, Alaska 99508, phone 907-729-3642, fax 907-729-3629, e-mail: vheart@anmc.org. Website: www.akchap.org.

Public Health Centers

State Government, Alaska Department of Health and Social Services, Division of Public Health operates Public Health Centers in 20 communities throughout the state. These Public Health Centers are staffed by public health nurses who provide the Division's community based service delivery for disease prevention, health promotion, and a variety of population-based services, as well as direct clinical preventive services to individuals and families. Public health nurses also provide services on an itinerant basis to more than 250 communities. Services include: prevention & control of diseases through immunizations, testing, treatment, contact tracing, education and outreach; prevention and control of injuries and chronic diseases through education and reduction of health risks; referral and linking to needed services; outreach to families and children at medical and social risk; pregnancy testing and promotion of early prenatal care; public health emergency preparedness and response; and participation in community partnerships to address issues of health concern. No one is refused service due to inability to pay. See <http://www.hss.state.ak.us/dph/nursing/default.htm>.

Local Government and Not-for-profit The Municipality of Anchorage, Norton Sound Health Corporation, Maniilaq Association in the Northwest Arctic Borough, and the North Slope Borough Health & Social Services Agency provide clinical preventive services to individuals and families and population-based disease prevention and health promotion services with support from grants from the State of Alaska's Public Health Nursing program.

Hospitals and LTC (Long Term Care facilities, also called Nursing Homes)

25 hospitals in Alaska provide a range of services including primarily inpatient care (medical, surgical, rehabilitation, psychiatric) and diverse outpatient services. More information is available from each facility and from the Alaska State Hospital and Nursing Home Association, 426 Main Street, Juneau, AK 99801, 907 586-1790 (www.ashnha.com).

Physician Clinics, Group Practices and Midlevel Clinics

This edition of the Directory includes a partial listing of physician clinics, group practices and private midlevel (nurse practitioner and physician assistant) clinics, particularly those located in non-urban areas. For a complete listing of physicians, advanced nurse practitioners and physicians assistants please see the Professional License listing (<http://www.dced.state.ak.us/occ/search3.htm>), or consult the following resources:

Exclusions

Not included in the Directory are community mental health and other behavioral health facilities and service organizations that are separate from primary care facilities; assisted living and group homes that may have some associated health services; home health services; hospice care; dentists and dental practices; and some other programs that provide other health and social services.

Please use the facilities update request form or send an email to infohealthplanning@health.state.ak.us with corrections, new information, or suggestions regarding what to include in the next edition of the Directory.

Not-for-profit refers to organization under section 501(c) of the internal revenue code.

Government organizations refer to state and local government operated and military facilities. In some cases in Alaska, a local government owns the facility but the clinic or hospital is run by a not-for-profit organization.

Private facilities are those owned and operated by individuals, partnerships or corporations without not-for-profit status.
